The matter is mentioned at this time for the reason that the treasury has been under heavy expense, and is at present in poor financial straits."

The above announcement was issued Wednesday by Wesley J. Sherman, Clerk of the Village, who augmented the statement by saying it was most important that it be heeded by cooperation of Club members.

Fifty-three Contest Names Received; Prize Awarding at 'Bal de Tete'

Five dollars in gold will be awarded Mrs. E. W. Oliver for the winning suggestion in the competition for a name to the newspaper. Tomorrow night at the "Bal de Tete" in the Clubhouse the prize will be presented to Mrs. Oliver for the name "Stroller" which was considered the best contribution received by the judges.

Fifty-three suggestions were received for the contest. One name was duplicated three times and another one twice. The greater number of contributions showed thought toward alliteration, while others were bent more toward the original. Some correspondents offered several names; twenty-four suggestions were sent in by one person.

Beauty and Oddity Will Feature First Fancy-Dress Dance of Season; to Take Place of Full Costume Exhibit

Departing from the usual fancy in France for any regal fete to have its terminus in a gigantic ball. Occasions of that nature were anticipated by lords and ladies alike with the greatest pleasure, for each determined that he or she would out-dress all others in beautiful raiment. There was a certain lady of distinctive lineage, a Madame de Pointfort, who had inherited a fabulous sum in sapphires and emeralds. Up to that time, at each regal ball, a Mademoiselle de Courtois had achieved the honors of beauty because of her magnificence in both gown and head dress. Madame de Pointfort set her mind upon out-doing the other in beauty of robing. The eve of the ball arrived, Mademoiselle de Courtois appeared in the personification of elaboration of head dress and gown. Her presence was prized more highly than that of any other. Then, at the psychological moment, when a hush had spread over the guests for an unknown reason, Madame de Pointfort was announced. Heads were turned to the door. (Continued on page 3)

Mrs. Nye stated that the committee had chosen this type of costume dance because of the facility of procuring requirements involved in dressing only the head. She mentioned in opinion that "the imprudent things are best for summer."

Contrast is the underlying principle in a "Bal de Tete". With ornamentation upon the body, which is expected to be clothed in ordinary garments, elaborate dressing about the face and head will be accentuated more than if an entire costume were worn. It was stated that men not conforming to the title of the dance would be fined one dollar.

A little-known legend tells about the origin of the "Bal de Tete". As may be perceived from the name, it was French in its beginning. One of the early kings of the land of the lily had called an international festival at the palace. It was his intent to procure amity between kingdoms because of treasury drainages during war time. It was the custom of those years

ANNOUNCE WEDDING OF BIRCH - HAPGOOD

Margaret Hapgood Marries Jersey Man; to Live in Mountain Lakes

Margaret Hapgood, long a resident of Shoreham, married William D. Birch of Dover, New Jersey, Thursday, July 17, at 4 p. m. The wedding took place at Easton, Penn., in the Reformed church, and was performed by the Reverend Meck.

Edward Neighbour and Edward Jenkens, both of Dover, and close friends of the bridegroom, were in attendance at the ceremony. Mr. and Mrs. Birch went to Skytop in the Poconos for the wedding trip, and report that they will shortly return to Mountain Lakes, New Jersey, where the Hapgood winter residence is situated. Mr. Birch is connected with an automobile concern in Dover, ten miles distant from Mountain Lakes.

The Birch-Hapgood marriage is the fourth wedding in Shoreham's younger set within six months. Slightly over a week ago, Helen Scott and Donald Edwards were married in New York; not a month has passed since the Pallister-Kohlman wedding; and the new Mrs. Birch's brother was wedded a short time ago.

WHAT IS A SQUAB?

A squab is a young pigeon. After the egg has been incubated for seventeen days by the parent birds, the squab hatches. At first it is fed a milky substance—called pigeon milk—which increases in density as the squab grows older. The squab sits quietly in the nest for four weeks and in that time puts on fat, which for lack of exercise is exceptionally tender. Nothing but the choicest grains are eaten by the parent birds and fed directly from them to the young squab until it is ready for consumption at the age of twenty-five to twenty-eight days.

way, invited ministers and ambassadors from every nation in the world peering into the far corridor for a first glimpse of the newcomer. There was a pause. Madame de Pointfort entered the dancing chamber, arrogance in every feature.

Her dress was of cotton. No train was visible. White was the only color from her slippers to the collar of her gown. But there plainness ceased. Upon her head glistened a blinding mass of blue green. Fully a thousand flawless emeralds and sapphires adorned her head. No one looked below her shining eyes which seemed to reflect the million tiny facets, which bounded from mirror to mirror in the royal chamber.

No one breathed. A French nobleman drew his sword. His lips parted and he uttered the words, "With the beauty of Madame de Pointfort in our eyes, let us call this festival the Bal de Tete".

SUIT THEM ALL

Controversy has become general concerning a move on the part of some male residents of the village to remove the upper portion of their bathing suits while on the beach. This act in itself may or may not be considered of sufficient import to be censured; it depends upon the individual who happens to deliberate the matter.

All of us, with our diverse tastes, cannot be reconciled with each other on all points. To some, partial lack of a bathing suit is distasteful, even repulsive; to others it denotes the desire for the health generated by the sun. Thus, the principle of right and wrong arises. Are the two words to be considered in the absolute or the comparative? Some theologians dogmatize upon the absolute. Other liberals take the antithetical viewpoint. The latter assert that an act is wrong only if considered in that light by the person who commits it. On the other side the absolutists point to laws and commandments, declaring that to disobey is to sin.

Therefore, to some people the lack of the top of a bathing suit is a grievance; if they should go without it, it would be wrong for them. Assuming another viewpoint, it would be right for a person to go without the top, providing he believed it to be right. This is the comparative phase.

However, some people think it wrong not to be fully clothed by a bathing suit. It, then, is wrong for them to lower the top. But they go a step farther. They say that, because they themselves consider it wrong, it is wrong, not only for them, but for others also. This is absolutism, covering a broader expanse of territory than the comparative.

In Shoreham there are both types of minds. Rarely do they clash. Hence, the occurrence in question is a rare occasion. The difficulty lies in satisfying both factions,—if they may be termed as such. In settling the matter, one party must be pleased without piquing the other. Nobody is attempting to prove whether it be right or wrong to lower the top, but which side offends the more. With the suit tops off somebody is offended; with them on, nobody is.

Therefore, in order not to provoke the wise thing to do is to wear the entire bathing suit, for in so doing even the opposition cannot claim offense.

DANGER UNAVERTED

One of our contemporaries, the Port Jefferson Echo, reports that disaster accompanied the July 4th opening celebration of the Stony Brook Yacht Club. Shortly before the scheduled exhibition of fireworks on a float seventy-five feet off shore, by some accident the entire supply of explosive rockets and pinwheels became ignited and, with a mad swirling and hissing, there commenced an un contemplated mixture of thrills and danger.

Fred Collabella, representative of the Payne Fireworks Company, who was to have exhibited the fireworks, became seriously burned, collapsing twice, as he attempted to avert a calamity occurring should the sky-rockets have headed toward the shore, where a crowd had gathered to witness the proceedings.

Never, to our knowledge, have such unforeseen circumstances become a reality at Shoreham. Precautions have been taken to guard against such an accident. A distance of nearly fifty feet is marked off between the supply and the firing line. No exposed light is brought near the reserve boxes. Flashlights are employed exclusively. Wooden paths are erected pointing away from the audience, so that skyrockets have no opportunity of harming bystanders.

Such care as has been exercised in this village by officials in providing for celebration of this nature is assurance enough that thought has been used to prevent such a danger unaverted.

ROSTER OF JOLLITY

It has been called to our attention that the story in last week's paper on the demolition of the Inn was not complete in regard to the residents of the village who congregated in the old edifice for Saturday night dancing. Names of numerous present property owners were omitted, we are told, people whom we would have known to have frequented the Inn had time permitted more extensive research.

For the list in question our sources of information were not numerous, and doubtless it is because of this fact that the roster was not so complete as it could have been. To cite two instances, the name of Mrs. David Sherman, long prominent in Shoreham society doings, and that of Miss M. M. Smith, one of the first residents of the town, both failed to appear in the story.

Others, doubtlessly, who should have been recognized in the article were not. It is for our own interest that we ask those who used to partake of jollity in the old Inn to communicate with us, so that the list may be as complete as possible.

Low Tidings

Lay-deez and gent-l-men of the radio audience, this is Mahem Grack-namee announcing. You are hereby informed that the winner of last week's contest for a column name is an entity who conceals itself under the spurious initials, P. I.

The winning title you see before your glistening orbs. Do you like it? Of course you like it. In fact you'll have to like it.

And now that YOU have decided to like the name, we herewith notify P. I. that he, she or it may henceforth and straightaway collect the $5,000,000 copper cash award by proving to the contest judges, the names of whom we omitted in the last issue, that the requirements have been fulfilled.

Via mention, the judges were, are and shall be the noted crooner C. Augustus Lindbergh, the celebrated aviator Hubert (Rudy) Vallee, and Sam Herman of Heidleburg, Oxford and N. Y. U.

Speaking of watering-troughs, have you heard the new dairy song, "Exactly Like You?"

We admire the coming of Paul Revere Kohlman to Shoreham. The village should now feel secure that any future disaster will be announced by the clattering hooves of the fiery steed.

Something should be done to stop the two cats who have been fighting on the top of the Hughes' Garage for the past week or more. They may be viewed between the hours of 12 and 12.

Another serious problem that faces this community is the bridge. What would happen if the Reid's Ice Cream truck should meet the Socony truck under the bridge, who would have the right of way and what good would the right of way do?

In the last village meeting, it was stated that men must wear their bathing suit tops while on the beach. The male is the down-trodden sex anyway.

We wish that some enterprising to bacconist would put on the market our dream cigarette.

It would be as endurable as a Melachrino before breakfast, as tasty as a Camel after a cup of coffee, as mild as a Chesterfield all the time, packed as tight as a Raleigh and as cheap as a Scotchman.

Don't bet on ping-pong.
